

Editorial

Greetings from the dynamic World of Laser Dentistry!!!

Today there is far more acceptance of the patient-friendly procedures and a widening horizon of permitted uses with lasers for the dental professional. Some countries, like South Korea, now allow the dental professionals to do facial and skin rejuvenation treatments with lasers. These along with facial botox and fillers have widened the scope offered by the dentists in their practices. This is a very good trend and has positive implications for the future of dentistry.

A word of caution though, any new modality that we include in our practice must be accompanied by a thorough education, hands on training, and certification through proper channels. Because any failure, due to a lack of quality education, will have significant ramifications on the width of treatments that we can offer. This will also ensure patient's trust in the dentist's ability and competence to perform their treatments.

Good Luck!!!

Suchetan Pradhan

Editor-in-Chief

International Journal of Laser Dentistry

MDS (Prosthodontics), MSc (Laser Dentistry)

Aachen University, Germany

Emdola, European Union